Cyber Resilience

BREACH RESPONSE PLANNING

Surviving the Inevitable

In the event of a suspected data breach, are you prepared to immediately spring into action on multiple fronts to protect your brand, your finances, and your customer and vendor relationships?

A Breach Response Plan addresses your enterprise-wide risks by outlining all actions that must be taken rapidly by both internal and external resources in a moment of crisis to enable appropriate communications and mitigate damage as much as possible.

As state, federal and international regulations become increasingly complicated and strict, it is more important than ever for organizations to be able to immediately respond to a breach with well-defined internal and external teams. Once a suspected breach occurs, there is no time and no leverage to set up new relationships. Planning helps organizations know when to involve outside counsel, when to disclose an event, what to say about an event, when to involve law enforcement, and how to cope with cyber-extortion.

Breach Response planning is a critical part of Enterprise Risk Management.

A rapid response to a breach is critical for limiting damage, collecting forensic information, complying with regulations, and protecting your brand.

Protect Your Brand and Your Value

Without a plan, organizations can face chaos and costly missteps—which could make them tomorrow’s front-page news.

NextLevel’s cyber-resilience Desired State Roadmap™ is designed to rapidly get you on the path to your desired outcome. In just two or three short weeks, we work with you to develop a plan that serves your business. You can take the plan and run with it, or count on us to assist with any aspect of the implementation.

- Through customized interviews and review of materials and processes, we quickly gain an understanding of your organization and operations, and assess the effectiveness and challenges within your enterprise risk and security functions.
- We identify and prioritize initiatives to address opportunities for improvement, and determine the time and resources necessary to implement.
- We help create a path for you to align the capabilities of your business functions with your needs and aspirations, ensuring buy-in and ownership at all levels of the organization.
