

Tim Price

Tim Price has more than 30 years of senior financial and operational management experience that spans from multi-billion-dollar public companies to small non-profits, and much of the ground in between. He has been part of the leadership teams of high growth, mature, turnaround and early growth companies, both public and private. The bulk of his career has been in retail and wholesale, including executive roles in such industry leading companies as Limited Brands, Kohl's, May Department Stores, and Hollywood Video. In addition to financial management as Controller and CFO, Tim has led the full spectrum of operational functions, including logistics, IT, HR, and loss prevention. As the CFO of three multi-billion-dollar public companies, Tim has led all aspects of the financial operations, including investor relations, capital structure, and SEC reporting. In both public and private companies Tim has been directly involved in creating and executing comprehensive strategic business plans. He is currently the CEO of Dolce Vita Footwear in Seattle, a high growth private company that designs, produces, and sells a portfolio of footwear and apparel brands. Prior to that, Tim was the CFO for Ultimate Electronics, a $400 million consumer electronics retailer in Colorado, the CFO for Hollywood Video, a $2 billion chain of 4,500 video rental and game stores, CFO for one division, and Controller for another division of May Department Stores, Controller for Kohl's Department Stores and Controller for the flagship division of The Limited. Tim holds a BA in Political Economics from Capital University.
